7. Original 2002 Summary Description

“The Galax Commercial Historic District was constructed upon undulating meadowlands above and west of the nearby Chestnut Creek in 1903. The town was laid out upon a gridiron plan consisting of twenty-six blocks, each block containing ten to sixteen lots and straddled the Grayson/Carroll County line. A public square was not included in the design since Galax would not function as a county seat. The historic commercial district includes five blocks along the north-to-south Main Street and adjacent blocks on the three east-to-west cross streets. There are sixty-five contributing buildings in the district and no non-contributing buildings. All buildings located within the district maintain a similar setback from the street. All of the buildings in the Galax Commercial Historic District are masonry buildings with shed roofs and commercial storefronts. A few of the buildings are one-story storefronts but a majority of the buildings are two-story commercial buildings with either apartments or offices located on the second floor. The majority of the buildings were built in the 1920's and exhibit a commercial style of simple plane façades with recessed panels in the parapets and simple corbel brick cornices. A few of the buildings were built at the turn of the century and several buildings were built in the 1930's and 1940's.”

With a correction made in 2008, there are 65 contributing and 1 non-contributing resources existing in the current district, prior to this boundary increase.

Current Summary Description

With plans to review and resurvey the entire district to include the historic area of all Galax and not just the commercial area, 107 Oldtown Street is the only addition being proposed at this time, due to the city's ownership and a pending grant project. As with the majority of the buildings in the Galax Commercial Historic District, the proposed boundary increase's main resource was constructed ca. 1920, within the current period of significance. Although the resources within the boundary increase are domestic in their historic and current use, they have been surrounded by commercial use buildings since their construction. The Pearlman House at 107 West Oldtown Street relates to the commercial buildings as one of the few surviving examples of the residences that surrounded the commercial district in the early days of Galax's development, and the Pearlman's owned and operated one of the commercial businesses on South Main Street.

Detailed Description/Site Inventory

107 West Oldtown Street, Galax, VA, 24333 Louie Pearlman House (VDHR #113-5001-0067)

Primary Resource: ca. 1920, Contributing

The ca. 1920 Pearlman House is a one-story, four-bay, frame house clad in asbestos shingles with a solid brick foundation. The asphalt shingle roof features a steeply-pitched hip roof with intersecting gables and two interior brick chimneys. One-over-one, double-hung sash wood windows with cornice heads and aluminum shutters light the interior. The single-leaf, fifteen-light door is protected by a gable overhang supported by elbow brackets. Several additions and porch enclosures have been constructed on the rear of the house. Although the house is vernacular in style, it exhibits minor influences from the Queen-Anne style with its complex roof form, steeply-pitched gables and paired windows.

Secondary Resource: ca. 1945, Contributing

A ca. 1945 two-story, concrete block garage apartment building is located to the rear of the house. Asphalt shingles cover the gable-front roof. The one-bay garage is accessed by a roll-up metal door. Two doors provide entry to the upper and lower apartments. One door is single leaf wood with two lights over four-panel and the other is a single-leaf wood door with a single light over a single panel door. Both doors are sheltered by gable overhangs supported by elbow brackets. A one-story addition with hip roof extends across the front of the garage with a single-leaf, four-panel door. The windows are metal casements with 8 lights.

8. Original 2002 Summary Statement of Significance

“The Downtown Commercial District of Galax is significant and unique in that it was designed for and built upon the American dream of free enterprise during the early decades of the twentieth century. It was developed by a group of self-made men who recognized the importance of translating the ideals of equality through private enterprise into the built environment. The Galax Commercial Historic District qualifies for the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion A, for its significance in the area of Commerce. This is due to its very specific nature as a planned commercial city. It is also eligible under Criterion C, for its significance in the area of Community Planning and Development, due to its development across a rigid, gridiron plan that would insure equal competition in private enterprise and that would allow businessmen to express themselves through the architecture of their buildings. The district's period of significance ranges from 1903, when the current street gridiron was developed, to 1949, the date of the most recent significant building within the downtown area.”

Boundary Increase Summary

There are plans for Galax to be reviewed and surveyed for a complete amendment to the existing historic district to include the entire town and not just the commercial resources. However, due to the city's ownership of 107 Oldtown Street and a pending grant project, this is the only addition being proposed at this time. The ca. 1920 Pearlman House at 107 West Oldtown Street contributes to the Galax Commercial Historic District as one of the few surviving examples of residential properties on West Oldtown Street adjacent to the commercial area. Built by a Jewish family that operated a clothing business on South Main Street, it is an example of a residence built by a business owner close to his commercial operation. The house is built within the period of significance for the district and relates to the “rigid, gridiron” town plan of the City of Galax as originally developed by its founders.

Historical Background

The Pearlman House was constructed ca. 1920 by Louie Pearlman. Pearlman was a Jewish merchant who relocated from New York to operate the L. Pearlman Fashion Shop at 112 South Main Street (no longer standing) located around the corner from his house. From the time the house was constructed until the 1930s and 1940s, the area surrounding the house at 107 West Oldtown Street was residential. During the 1930s and 1940s, the downtown commercial area expanded along the north side of the 100 block of West Oldtown Street. Although this resource is residential, it is currently surrounded by commercial buildings and the City of Galax plans to renovate the building for adaptive reuse as a visitors' center.

10. Geographical Data

Verbal Boundary Description

The boundary of the Galax Commercial Historic District Boundary Increase is shown as the bold dashed line on the accompanying map entitled "Boundary Increase Galax Commercial Historic District," scale 1"=200'. The area of the boundary increase consists of tax parcel reference number 000006282001 as noted on the City of Galax tax records.

Boundary Justification:

The boundaries of the Galax Commercial Historic District Boundary Increase encompass a single residential property that is adjacent to the commercial district and now surrounded by commercial buildings. Historically, this property was closely related to the commercial district as its owner operated a clothing store nearby on South Main Street. The district with the boundary increase is a contiguous area of the historic commercial and governmental center of Galax which reflect the historic character that was established during the period of significance and that have retained their integrity of form and materials. The district includes most of the commercial area from the 1903 city gridiron, except in areas where modern alterations and intrusions have disturbed the character of the streetscape.
