Broad Street Commercial Historic District Boundary Increase (127-0375)
Richmond, VA

7. Summary Description:

The Broad Street Commercial Historic District is located in the central business district of the City of Richmond. It was originally listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1987. The district encompasses what was the hub of the Richmond's late-nineteenth and early-twentieth century retail development. The original nomination states, "The portion of Broad Street included in the historic district is the most architecturally cohesive and is representative of the commercial areas on Broad Street." The district originally encompassed 10 blocks bounded by Belvidere Street on the west and 4th Street on the east. The northern and southern boundary lines for the Broad Street Commercial Historic District have been the center line of the alley between Broad and Marshall Streets and the alley between Broad and Grace Streets, even in places where the alleys have been built over and provide no physical separation. A boundary increase in 2004 added a non-contiguous area to the district located to the west of Belvidere Street and included the 700 to 900 blocks of West Broad Street and portions of North Laurel and Gilmer Streets.

This boundary increase area includes two half-blocks north of the alley between Broad and Marshall Streets and is bounded on the north by Marshall Street, on the west by First Street, and on the east by Second Street. This boundary increase area contains eight contributing buildings and one non-contributing building. The contributing buildings within the boundary increase are architecturally similar to the buildings facing Broad Street and historically served similar commercial functions. The resources are primarily two-story brick buildings in Late-19th- and 20th-century Revival or vernacular commercial styles. Many of the buildings have storefronts with decorative treatments above the storefronts and several buildings also feature decorative cornices.

Detailed Description:

The majority of the buildings in the boundary increase area are two-story brick commercial buildings, with the exception of the one-story brick building at 115 E. Marshall Street and the two-story house at 313 North 2nd Street that has a one-story commercial addition at the front. While some of the buildings have been altered, they have retained their historic integrity and in many cases have been well preserved. The dominant style of buildings in the Broad Street Commercial Historic District is Italianate, with Romanesque Revival, Classical Revival and other commercial vernacular styles making appearances. The buildings in the boundary increase area are Late-19th- and 20th-Century Revival and vernacular commercial styles.

INVENTORY

115 East Marshall Street, S. T. Beveridge Garage 127-0375-9001

Primary Resource Information: Commercial Building, Stories 1.00, Style: Commercial, ca 1910

One-story six-bay masonry commercial building that has been heavily altered. The façade is a series of storefronts with split face block below the storefronts. There are three entrances with aluminum single leaf doors. An awning runs across the entire façade. There is a stuccoed field above the storefront with two horizontal bands. A horizontal band runs across the facade below the parapet at the flat roof. The building sits at the southwest corner of East Marshall and N. 2nd Streets. The primary façade is on East Marshall Street and the building wraps around the corner to North 2nd Street where there are additional shops. There is a concrete sidewalk to the north and a brick sidewalk to the east.

Primary Resource Information: Commercial Building, Stories 2.00, Style: Late 19th and 20th Century Revivals, ca 1925, Architect: Henry T. Barnham

Two-story, three-bay building is constructed of brick laid in a stretcher bond pattern. The north bay of the first story has a single leaf paneled door and a recessed entrance to the north with a single leaf metal door with one light. This bay originally had an overhead door that has since been filled with brick. The central and south bays are covered by an awning. A central paneled door with one light is flanked by fixed windows. The light on the door and the windows are covered with iron grilles. The second story has windows arranged in three bays. Each window has a central light flanked by with two narrow lights. A transom on top mirrors this pattern. The windows are separated by brick piers and a continuous masonry sill has corbels at both ends. A cast iron cornice with modillion blocks sits below the parapet with stone coping.

313 North 2nd Street 127-0375-9007

Primary Resource Information: Commercial Building, Stories 2.00, Style: Late 19th and 20th Century Revivals, ca 1900

This building consists of two sections. The original building is two stories and is constructed of tan brick laid in a stretcher bond pattern. The first story is obscured by a modern addition. The second story of the original building has a projecting bay to the north with a gable roof covered in coursed slate shingles. Two 9/9 double-hung sash windows have lintels that are formed by a course of rusticated stone. The south bay has a single leaf wood door with one light and a small transom above. The lintel is formed by the course of rusticated stone. A cast iron cornice sits below a flat roof with a parapet and false mansard front. The parapet has metal coping and decorative end pieces. The one story addition is constructed of brick laid in a stretcher bond pattern. A fixed storefront window is in the north-bay and a recessed entrance covered by a metal gate is in the south-bay. To the south of this is a solid wooden door. A continuous awning covers the first story, which rises to a flat roof with a parapet. The building is attached on the south and an alley is to the north. Primary Resource Information: Mixed: Commerce/Domestic, Stories 2.00, Style: Late 19th and 20th Century Revivals, ca 1920

This is a two-story, seven-bay painted brick building. The brick is laid in a stretcher bond pattern. The first story is seven separate storefronts with fixed windows and a paneled door with one large light. The transom above each door has four vertically arranged lights and the transom above each storefront window has nine lights arranged in a similar pattern. The storefront on the north corner of the building has a wider storefront that wraps around the corner. With the exception of this section, the storefronts are paired, separated by a single leaf door with one large light in between each pair. The storefront door flanks this door, with the storefront windows on the outside. Stacked brick piers separate each door and window and sit at the edges of the building as well. A course of vertically stacked bricks runs above the transoms. The second story has seven sets of paired 1/1 double-hung wood sash windows with brick sills and lintels. The lintels are a soldier course with a keystone that is repeated at the edges. The windows in the southernmost bay are separated by two corbelled panels with the same lintel pattern above. Brick piers with a toothed pattern at the edges separate the remaining pairs of windows. A course of horizontally stacked header bricks runs above the lintels. A cornice has brackets and panels. The building continues to rise for two feet above the cornice in a Flemish bond pattern. The flat roof with a parapet has metal coping in the same pattern as the cornice.

8. Statement of Significance

The Boundary Increase area of the Broad Street Commercial Historic District is eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places under criteria A and C. The district is eligible under criterion A because it illustrates the pattern of urban development experienced in the City of Richmond in the early-twentieth century when mid-nineteenth century residential neighborhoods were given over to commercial uses and the growth of the central business district. The district is also eligible under criterion C because it embodies representative architectural styles from the late-nineteenth to the mid-twentieth century and contains the work of a number of local and regionally recognized architects.

Historic Background

The buildings in the Broad Street Commercial Historic District date from 1852 to 1970 but a majority of the structures were erected between 1880 and 1930. The same is true for the proposed boundary increase which contains a collection of early-twentieth century retail buildings and lone surviving late-nineteenth century dwelling. The building at 313 North 2nd Street, built between 1895 and 1905, is one of the few dwellings that were present at the beginning of the 20th century to survive, albeit a storefront addition to the facade. The area reflects the migration of retail and commercial uses into what had previously been a residential neighborhood with only a few shops. The 1895 and 1905 Sanborn maps and the 1916 City of Richmond Directory reveal a primarily residential neighborhood with a few scattered businesses that catered to the needs of the surrounding community. Two boarding houses, an employment agency, and the Monroe Social and Pleasure Club were located on North 2nd Street. According to the 1919 Sanborn Map and the 1921 directory, businesses had begun to replace some of the homes. A shoe repair shop, a furniture store and two tailors had moved into the area; and the Carnegie Steel Corporation shared office space with the Virginia Business Exchange. During the 1920s the area experienced a dramatic growth in commercial enterprises and according to the 1924 Sanborn Map the transition of the area south of Marshall Street from residential to commercial was complete. Among the businesses that operated in the 1920s were a bicycle repair shop, an auto repair garage, two billiard parlors, a restaurant, a manufacturing facility, the Richmond Meat market, and a number of specialty stores. Because the area was not on the main shopping street, the shops were somewhat less stylish than those along Broad and Grace Streets to the south.

One of the more significant buildings that once stood in the boundary increase area was the St. Luke Penny Savings Bank that was located on the southeast corner of Marshall and First Streets. The St. Luke Penny Savings Bank, established in 1903, was an outgrowth of the Independent Order of St. Luke, an African-American fraternal business organization. The bank was established during Maggie Lena Walker's thirty-five year association with the organization. The Classical Revival bank building was designed by Charles Thaddeus Russell, a native of Richmond, who was one of Virginia's first black architects. Russell graduated from Hampton Institute in 1899 and worked as an architect at Tuskegee Institute. Returning to Richmond in 1907, he became a professor of Industrial Work and Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Virginia Union University.

Other architects who designed buildings in the boundary increase area include Marcellus E. Wright, Luther T. Bengston, Henry T. Barnham and Davis Brothers. Marcellus E. Wright designed a store for H. F. Grimmell in 1913 which stood next to the St. Luke Penny Savings Bank on the east side of First Street. The now demolished store is said to have been a four-story brick commercial building with limestone and granite accents on the façade and copper cornices at the first and fourth stories. There were prism glass transoms on the first story store front windows. Marcellus Eugene Wright was a native of Hanover County and received his architectural training at the Virginia Mechanics Institute, the School of Applied Art in Philadelphia, and the University of Pennsylvania. He returned to Richmond in 1908 where he was employed in the office of Charles M. Robinson and established his own firm in 1912. The prolific firm has continued to operate; Wright died in 1962. Henry Thomas Barnham designed two stores in the proposed expansion area. The C. W. Vaughn Hardware Store (315 N. 1st Street) and the S.T. Beveridge Store (315 N. 2nd Street) are linked by a public garage building that occupies the center of the block. The garage was designed by L. T. Bengston in 1924. The first stories on both of Barnham's commercial buildings have been altered, but at one time both incorporated garage openings. The second stories have similar tripartite arrangements with decorative metal cornices set below articulated parapets. Barnham, an engineer, was educated at Newark Technical Institute and Columbia University. He practiced architecture in Richmond from 1914 until his death in 1937. Little is known of Luther (Ludwig) T. Bengston and his architectural practice. For much of his career he was associated with the North Carolina firm of Benton and Benton. The Richmond office which he headed was known as Benton and Bengston in 1922. He was also a partner in the West Virginia firm of Wysong, Bengston and Jones in the 1930s.

Geographical Data

Verbal Boundary Description

Starting at the center line of North First Street at the northern boundary line of the Broad Street Commercial Historic District then north along said line to the center line of East Marshall Street; then east along said line to the projected eastern property line of parcel N0000037042; then south along said property line and the eastern property lines of parcels N0000037041, 37040, 37039, 37001, and 37037 to the northern property line of parcel N0000037036; then along said property line to the eastern property line of parcel N0000037036; then south along said property line and the eastern property line of parcel N0000037035 to the northern boundary of the Broad Street Commercial Historic District; then west along said northern boundary line to the beginning.

The following City of Richmond tax parcels are included in the Broad Street Commercial Historic District Boundary Increase: N0000060009, N0000060013, N0000060015, N0000060016, N0000060017, N0000060037, N0000037001, N00000370035, and N0000037036.

Boundary Justification

The impetus for the proposed boundary increase to the Broad Street Commercial Historic District is the result of examining areas that were included in neither the Broad Street Commercial Historic District nor the Jackson Ward Historic District but located between the two districts. These omitted areas share both architectural qualities and historic characteristics with the adjacent districts. It was determined after surveying the thirty-seven buildings contained within the omitted areas that those buildings south of Marshall should be incorporated into the Broad Street Commercial Historic District and those buildings north of Marshall Street should be included in the Jackson Ward Historic District. The northern boundary of the Broad Street Commercial Historic District was formed by the center line of the alley dividing Broad and Marshall Streets. The original nomination states, "The buildings which face on 1st and 2nd Streets have been excluded from the district. This was a street with a major shopping area for Richmond's black community and has a different history and architectural character." Research has shown that the buildings in the proposed boundary increase share a similar architectural character, and historically served similar commercial functions and a similar population as those buildings on the north side of Broad Street and are therefore related to the Broad Street Commercial Historic District.
