DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

a. BACKGROUND INFORMATION: Sherwood Forest, whimsically named by the tenth President, who considered himself as much a political outlaw as Robin Hood, was John Tyler's home during the last 20 years of his life. His dream of a quiet family life at Sherwood Forest, which attained momentary reality when he left the White House in 1845, was shattered within the next decade and a half. The disruption of the Union called him into public life again, and he died in the service of his State early in 1862.

Tyler purchased the estate, originally called Creek Plantation, from Collier Minge in 1842. It comprised some 1,200 acres of land and was located only a short distance from his birthplace, Greenway. Improvements included a 2½-story frame dwelling, built in 1780, with various outbuildings. Tyler built a covered colonnade to connect the main house with the kitchen and laundry to the east, adding a corresponding west wing to serve as a ballroom and a private office. Sherwood Forest thus became unusual architecturally in that, though only one room in thickness, it was some 300 feet long.

The house, still owned by members of the Tyler family, is little changed from the time of the President's occupancy. The 1,000-acre estate includes a 12-acre yard surrounding the house, with a great variety of ancient trees and the remains of formal gardens. The house is furnished with original pieces and a number of family mementos. It is open to visitors on weekdays.

b. BOUNDARIES: (Because of poor condition of property, boundaries of the landmark, as stated below, have been reduced to about 40 acres rather than the original 1,200 acres. Acreage within boundary could and should be increased if property should later be improved.)

Beginning with a dirt road, located off the south side of Route 5, at a point about 10,400 feet east of the junctions of Routes 619 and 5, proceed east on Route 5 for about 1,050 feet; thence south for about 1,200 feet; thence west for about 1,100 feet to a small lake; follow northern boundary of said lake for about 800 feet; thence north for about 1,800 feet to Route 5; thence east on Route 5 for about 1,300 feet to point of beginning.
