Summary Paragraph

The gray granite Ashland marker is located just west of the Jefferson Davis Highway (Washington Highway) at its intersection with Cedar Lane (Route 623) in Glen Allen, in Hanover County, Virginia, about 12 miles north of Richmond. The marker is one of sixteen erected in Virginia along the Jefferson Davis Highway between 1927 and 1946. The Jefferson Davis Highway was a nationwide memorial project of the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) beginning in 1913 and continuing until 1947 when the highway's terminal marker was placed in Arlington, Virginia.

Narrative Description

The Ashland Marker is a gray granite ashlar pedestal with a sloping top. The granite pedestal is 33" tall, 25" wide, 16" thick and rests on a 10" granite base. Its sloped face has a bronze plaque reading: "Jefferson Davis Highway Virginia." A second bronze plaque is attached to the flat front (east) face of the stone that reads:

The marker faces east toward U.S. Route 1 and sits in a grassy triangle formed by U.S. Route 1 and State Route 623 (Cedar Lane) in the public right of way and near an office building. A water hydrant has been placed a few feet away from the marker. The intersection is surrounded by businesses and commercial establishments.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance, applicable criteria, justification for the period of significance, and any applicable criteria considerations.)

The Ashland Jefferson Davis Highway Marker is being nominated for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under the Multiple Property Documentation Form, UDC Commemorative Highway Markers along the Jefferson Davis Highway in Virginia. The markers included in the MPD meet Criterion A in the areas of Transportation and Social History and are significant at the statewide level because they are associated with the period of “named highways” in U.S. history beginning in 1913 and because they represent a significant achievement for a women’s organization. The period of significance is 1927, the year the marker was erected. As a commemorative resource, the Ashland Marker meets Criteria Consideration F. The marker is primarily commemorative, yet it possesses symbolic value and its own historical significance as part of this early attempt to mark a cross-country highway as a memorial to the first and only President of the Confederate States of America.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The Ashland Marker is one of sixteen Virginia Markers erected along the Jefferson Davis Highway (U.S. Route 1) between 1927 and 1947 as a memorial to Jefferson F. Davis, first and only president of the Confederate States of America. All sixteen markers remain standing and despite the minor relocation of several markers to address highway safety concerns or to improve traffic flow, all retain their historic relationship to U.S. Route 1, which, for the most part, constitutes the route of the Jefferson Davis Highway through Virginia. The markers were paid for and erected and maintained by the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) through local UDC Chapters, the Virginia Division of the UDC and the General Organization of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. This activity was replicated in the other former Confederate States and was a part of a cross-country route mapped as the Jefferson Davis Highway and promoted by the United Daughters of the Confederacy through educational brochures and travel publications. The establishment of the Jefferson Davis Highway, the erection of the markers honoring Confederate President Jefferson Davis, and the publications of maps and educational brochures about the locations through which the cross-country route passed is considered by the United Daughters of the Confederacy to be one of its greatest undertakings. The Ashland Marker was dedicated by the Lee Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy Chapter on November 19, 1927.

Mrs. Alexander B. White, President General of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, conceived the idea for the Jefferson Davis Highway in 1913, following the establishment of the Lincoln Highway earlier that year. From 1913 until about 1925, it was common for private organizations to identify a route, give it a name and promote its use and improvement. The Jefferson Davis Highway extends a distance of 3,417 miles from Arlington, Virginia, to San Diego, California, and then north up the Pacific coast to the Canadian border. The Virginia section of the highway extends from the Potomac River Bridge at Arlington, through Fredericksburg, Richmond, and Petersburg to the Virginia/North Carolina state line, a distance of 235 miles. Virginia’s General Assembly designated U.S. Route 1 as the Jefferson Davis Memorial Highway in March 1922.

The Friday, November 18, 1927, edition of the Richmond News Leader announced the unveiling of the Ashland UDC marker scheduled for the following day. The “Memorial Boulder,” as it was called, had been erected earlier by the Lee Chapter, UDC and “appropriate exercises” were described for the ceremonial unveiling planned for 3:00 pm on November 19, 1927. The article noted that a bus would be leaving the Confederate Soldiers’ Home on the Boulevard in

Ashland UDC Jefferson Davis Highway Marker

Hanover County, VA

Name of Property

County and State

Richmond at 2:00 for the purpose of getting veterans, and other interested persons, to the ceremony.

The news article went on to say that two Confederate veterans, John R. Tyree and E. G. Tyler, would draw the flag back from the tablet, while a singing group headed by Hunter Wagner performed. Rev. J.O. Helsabeck would offer a prayer, followed by the unveiling. The speaker for the afternoon, Frank Taylor Sutton, Jr., would be introduced by Mrs. Jennie Gunn Ball, President of the Lee Chapter. After additional musical numbers and a benediction, the ceremony would be concluded.

The Ashland marker carries two bronze tablets. The inscription on the plaque on the front of the marker reads, "Erected by Lee Chapter, No 123, United Daughters of the Confederacy in honor of their heroic ancestors." A copper box was placed within the marker under a top plate to hold a parchment list with the names of the ancestors being honored along with the names of the donors honoring their ancestors. The list is attached as Appendix 1.

In addition to particular individuals being honored by their descendants, the list also included the "veterans who have passed away at Lee Camp Soldiers' Home," who were recognized by Lee Juniors, Children of the Confederacy.

The site for the marker was chosen for its proximity to the battles of Seven Pines, Mechanicsville, Gaines' Mill and Cold Harbor, which took place in the eastern part of Henrico and Hanover counties during 1862 and 1864. The Seven Pines and Mechanicsville battlefields no longer exist, having been developed for housing in a fast growing area of Henrico County. Development has also occurred around both Gaines' Mill and Cold Harbor in eastern Hanover County. However, portions of both of those battlefields are owned by the National Park Service and administered by Richmond National Battlefield Park. About 50 acres each at Gaines' Mill and Cold Harbor are owned by Hanover County which maintains the acreage as small park sites.

The Ashland marker has been moved twice. In the 1970s, it was moved farther back from the highway to accommodate the widening of Route 1 and in the early 1980s, it was relocated to the west side of Route 1. The Lee Chapter UDC currently maintains the marker, and it sits on land owned by the Virginia Department of Transportation

The Ashland Jefferson Davis Highway Marker retains its integrity of location, setting, design, materials, workmanship, feeling and association. Although the area surrounding the marker has changed since 1927 and despite its minor relocations, it retains its historic association with the highway. The design of the marker has not changed in the years since its erection and there has not been any loss of its original features. The workmanship of the marker has not been altered in the years since 1927. The marker's integrity of feeling is intact. It retains a simple dignity and the feeling of an earlier age of travel when markers by the side of the road were more easily seen and appreciated by the passing public. Finally, the marker retains its integrity of association, conveying its origins as a historical memorial.

Verbal Boundary Description (Describe the boundaries of the property.)

The Ashland Marker is located west of Jefferson Davis Highway (Route 1) at the intersection of Cedar Lane in Glen Allen, Virginia, Hanover County. The marker is 11.6 miles north of Richmond, Virginia. The marker is placed on a granite base that is set into the ground. The historic boundary conforms to the measurements of the marker, 33" tall, 25" wide, and 16" thick, and the 10"-thick granite base.

Boundary Justification (Explain why the boundaries were selected.)

The historic boundary includes only the marker itself and the stone base on which it rests as these comprise the historic property.
