DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

a. BACKGROUND INFORMATION: On both historical and architectural grounds, Bacon's Castle is one of the important buildings of the 17th century colonial period.

About mid-September, 1676, a number of the rebel followers of Nathaniel Bacon seized the brick house of Major Arthur Allen and fortified it. From that use the house received its present name of Bacon's Castle. The garrison, commanded at various times by William Rookings, Arthur Long, Joseph Rogers and John Clements, retained control of the house for over three months while their cause declined. The death of Bacon in October left his forces under the leadership of Joseph Ingram, who proved to be unsuited to the command. Ingram dispersed his army in small garrisons, and as the demoralized troops began to plunder indiscriminately, the condition of the colony was soon deplorable.

Berkeley began to conquer the isolated posts one by one, some by force and some by persuasion. On December 29, a loyal force aboard the vessel Young Prince, captured an unidentified "fort" which many historians have identified as Bacon's Castle. After withstanding a brief siege early in January, 1677, the loyalists used the "fort" as a base of operations for the last engagements of the rebellion, which ended before the month was out.

The house built by Arthur Allen about 1655, is the earliest extent example of the cross plan. It is a two-story brick structure laid in English bond, with a ten-foot-square two-story porch in front and a larger stair tower behind. The main floor originally had a great hall and smaller parlor, and the stair tower afforded access to a large cellar containing several rooms and an eight-foot-wide fireplace, as well as two large bedrooms on the second floor and three more in the garret.

Exterior features of note are the Flemish gables at each end of the house, with large triple chimneys standing just free of the gables. The chimneys set diagonally and joined only at the caps, rose from a straight stack ten feet wide and four feet deep. It is a unique example of Jacobean architecture.

b. BOUNDARIES: (It is recognized that Bacon's Castle farm, including the Bacon's Castle home, consists of 1141 acres. This acreage is bounded on the south by Routes 10 and 617; on the west and north by Chippokes Creek; and on the east by Castle Mill Run).

Notwithstanding the above, and recognizing that national landmark status has been given Bacon's Castle on the basis of the merits of the home, the following boundaries are deemed sufficient and appropriate for the protection of that home:
