STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Cartersville Bridge survives as the last major timber bridge across the James River. The framing is used in conjunction with castiron connections, making the bridge a rare example of composite construction. This unusual superstructure, together with its stone piers and abutments put up in 1822 to support the first Cartersville Bridge, make the present bridge an important engineering landmark.

The first bridge across the James River between Pemberton and Cartersville was built by the Cartersville Bridge Company, a private corporation, chartered in 1819. This first bridge was a wooden covered bridge and the contractor for it was David Scott of Maryland. The contract between Scott and the Cartersville bridge Company was signed July 19 1820. Construction was to begin September 1, 1820, and to be completed December 25, 1821. Amendments to the original contractural agreement were made on May 31, 1821 and December 13, 1821 for additional work on the bridge. The final cost of construction was estimated by the company to be approximately $24,000.00.

This first bridge apparently was not well built. William Bolling noted in his diary on September 8, 1827: "The 3rd arch from the Goochland side broke in on the ist inst. and Mrs. F. B. Deane, Jr., had a providential escape, having entered the Bridge in a carriage was warned back by Mr. Zachariah Taylor (the keeper) and whilst crossing the Ferry it broke in." Bolling visited the bridge the next day and stated: "Walked on and examined the Bridge with Mr. Utz and found all the arches giving way, and sooner or later will in my opinion fall in - a more infamous piece of work I never saw."

More trouble occurred within twenty years after the original construction when the superstructure either collapsed or was destroyed. A report submitted by Claudius Crozet, Principal Engineer of the Virginia Board of Public Works provides an excellent description of the rebuilding of the bridge in 1841 and also suggests several reasons that the bridge might have collapsed. It is apparent from this report and engineer survey that the majority of the superstructure of the bridge was rebuilt in 1841 and 1842. Joseph N. Carrington, contractor for the second bridge, signed a contract with the Cartersville Bridge Company on March 12, 1842. It is believed, however, that Mr. Carrington died before the work was completed.

The second bridge collapsed or was destroyed a number of years later and was not rebuilt until 1883. During the interim years a ferry was maintained between Cartersville and Pemberton by the James River and Kanawha Canal Company. This ferry was in operation as early as 1841 and is mentioned in the Crozet report. The operation of the ferry was transferred to the Richmond & Allegany Railroad Company at an undertermined date. In 1873, the R. & A. contracted with the counties of Goochland and Cumberland to rebuild the bridge superstructure with combination iron and wood to be built on the original piers and abutments. This third bridge was completed in 1884.
