

Nineteenth-Century
Brick Architecture
in the Roanoke Valley and Beyond:

Discovering the True Legacies of the
DEYERLE BUILDERS

MICHAEL J. PULICE

OPENING & RECEPTION BOOK SIGNING

December 13 • 7 p.m.

O. Winston Link Museum

Free to members

$5 donation for non-members

Introduction by Michael Pulice,
Architectural Historian for the Virginia
Department of Historic Resources

O. WINSTON LINK MUSEUM
101 SHENANDOAH AVE., ROANOKE, VA
540-982-5465 • WWW.LINKMUSEUM.ORG

EXHIBIT OPEN DECEMBER 13, 2011—FEBRUARY 6, 2012

SPONSORED BY:
HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF WESTERN VIRGINIA AND
VIRGINIA DEPARTMENT OF HISTORIC RESOURCES

Nineteenth-Century Brick Architecture
in the Roanoke Valley and Beyond:
Discovering the True Legacies of the Deyerle Builders

A well-known local legend names Benjamin Deyerle as the leading brick maker and builder in the Roanoke Valley during much of the 19th century. But new research reveals that some of the attributions are based entirely on oral tradition and conjecture. Benjamin's brother David, half-brother Joseph, and Joseph's son J. C. Deyerle, also happen to have been accomplished brick makers and builders. This book provides an accurate account of each Deyerle builder's career. A novel research approach focused on bricks—how they were made and how they were laid—provided many decisive clues. Moreover, the era's brick making, building construction, and architectural design in the Roanoke Valley and beyond are effectively explained and illustrated with 180 images and maps.

$35 PLUS $5 SHIPPING

Call for shipping price for orders of multiple books

Available December 13, 2011

Make checks payable to:

Historical Society of Western Virginia

P. O. Box 1904

Roanoke, VA 24008

Historical Society of Western Virginia
P. O. Box 1904
Roanoke, VA 24008